OPENING CEREMONY

Location: Theatre A+B

12.00 – 14.00 OPENING CEREMONY

Tuesday 5 March 2024

CRIME PREVENTION CONFERENCE

Location: Theatre A+B and C

14.00 – 14.15 Strategic Session | Opening Keynote | Theatre A+B Evolution of International Collaboration Against Crime

Today, interagency cooperation to address and combat various forms of criminal activities that transcend national borders is more important than ever before. Collaboration is crucial in an increasingly globalized world where criminals can exploit differences in legal systems, jurisdictions, and enforcement capabilities. This session underlines the importance of a multilateral cooperative framework and policies. How can PDs and agencies design a flexible mechanism to share strategic plans and align operational actions?

Wade Carpenter
President,
International Association of Chiefs of Police

14.15 – 14.30 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre A+B Legitimacy, Good Governance and Accountability as Cornerstones' to Support of Effective Policing Globally

To be effective, the police must be accepted by, and representative of, the population it is meant to service. Ensuring a balance between effectiveness of police institutions and their accountability to the rule of law, is central to maintain their legitimacy and the trust of the population.

Attendee Insights:

The session will highlight the role to be played by government Ministries, Parliaments, Ombuds-institutions, civil society and the media, but the most important role remains a change of approach and culture within policing itself. A major challenge facing governments today is the concerted, co-ordinated and sophisticated actions of organised crime syndicates.

Paulo Costa
Principal Programme Manager
& Senior Security Sector Advisor,
DCAF

14.30 – 15.10 Strategic Session | Leadership Discussion | Theatre A+B Human Trafficking: Establishing the Building Blocks of an Effective Response

Human trafficking is a serious violation of human rights and involves the exploitation and coercion of individuals for various purposes. With no doubt, it's important for countries, police forces, international organizations, and NGOs to collaborate, share information, intelligence, and best practices for better outcomes

09.00 – 09.20 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre B Focusing International Police Cooperation Targeting Financial Crimes and Anti-Corruption

The INTERPOL Financial Crime and Anti-Corruption Centre (IFCACC) was established in 2022 in response to global crime threats, such as fraud, money laundering, and corruption. IFCACC has developed a number of unique capabilities to support our member countries and has developed strong ties with relevant organizations. The Centre has ambitions to enhance law enforcement's ability to identify, trace illicit assets, seize proceeds of crime, and deprive criminals of their ill-gotten gains. Giving the growing incidence of financial crimes it is important for international police cooperation to be more focused on combating financial crimes and corruption since most crimes fester and thrive on illicit financial flows.

Isaac Kehinde Oginni
Director – Financial Crime
And Anti-Corruption
Centre, INTERPOL

09.20 – 09.40 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre B The Other Side of the Coin – An Analysis of Financial and Economic Crime in the European Union.

Burkhard Mühl
Head of European Financial & Economic Crime Centre, Europol

09.40 – 10.20 Strategic Session | Leadership Discussion | Theatre B Exploring the State of Illicit Economic Crime

Illicit economic crimes encompass a range of offenses related to financial fraud, corruption, money laundering, embezzlement, and other economic activities conducted in violation of the law. These crimes can have far-reaching negative impacts on economies, governments, businesses, and individuals. It's crucial to have a multifaceted approach from law enforcement agencies, financial institutions, regulatory bodies, and international organizations to combat.

Captain Javier Sánchez
Head of the Economic Crimes Group, Guardia Civil

Attendee Insights:

Understand the new methods that criminals use to launder proceeds from economic crime and what tools government and private sector can apply to disrupt such activities? Financial information exchange partnerships and their impact on reducing economic crimes and arresting suspects, tips for fraud analysts to mitigate new economic conditions and improve reporting and Inter-agency cooperation between financial investigators and environmental crime agencies, to detect and pursue financial investigations into environmental crimes.

10.20 – 10.40 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre B Exploring the Latest Updates on Refund and Asset Tracking

Asset tracking is crucial in financial crime investigations, helping law enforcement agencies follow the money trail to identify suspicious transactions, hidden assets, and illicit financial activities. For effective results, law enforcement agencies often collaborate with financial institutions, regulatory bodies, and international partners.

Simon Marsh
Regional Coordinator for Southern and Eastern Africa, International Centre for Asset Recovery

Attendee Insights:

Join the session to examine the latest challenges and enforcements priorities associated with refund and asset tracking. How to conduct effective investigations and avoid common pitfalls? And technological advances and new opportunities for financial crime.

10.40 – 11.00 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre B Strength in Unity: Fighting Counterfeiting and Organized Crime Together

Session will cover the harms of counterfeiting crime to national and global economies, as well as to consumer safety. He will demonstrate the importance and impact of working with like-minded, committed partners in the public and private sectors to protect consumers and fight against fakes.

Robert Barchiesi
President, International
AntiCounterfeiting Coalition

11.00 – 11.20 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre B Protection and Enforcement of IPR

Counterfeiting of automotive parts is pervasive and with devastating economic impact. Kenya has not been spared the menace. Since its establishment in 2010, the Anti-Counterfeit Authority (ACA) in Kenya has seized counterfeit goods valued at Ksh.4.3billion (US$ 26.6million) with 7 per cent being automotive spare parts sector. That is, the Authority has seized various counterfeit automotive spare parts valued at Ksh.307.6million (US$ 1.9million). This presentation highlights six (6) of negative economic consequences namely: safety risks; damage to genuine manufactures; eroded consumer confidence, infringement of IPR discouraging innovation and investment in research and development. Finally, from the perspective of an enforcement authority, we share some experiences, challenges and insights.

Dr. Robi Mbugua Njoroge
CEO, Anti-Counterfeit Authority

11.20 – 11.40 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre B Guardians of the Ledger: Smart Strategies in Battling Crypto Villains

Tracking currencies in the digital age, particularly cryptocurrencies, poses unique challenges and opportunities for law enforcement agencies tasked with maintaining public safety and preventing financial crimes. Agencies are investing in specialized training and partnerships with experts in cryptocurrency and blockchain technology.

Igor Angelini
Senior Advisor to the Executive Director, Europol

11.40 – 12.20 Strategic Session | Leadership Discussion | Theatre B Tracking the Currencies in Digital Age

Tracking currencies in the digital age, particularly cryptocurrencies, poses unique challenges and opportunities for law enforcement agencies tasked with maintaining public safety and preventing financial crimes. Agencies are investing in specialized training and partnerships with experts in cryptocurrency and blockchain technology.

Innovation matters to policing, law enforcement, public safety, and security services (both cyber and physical). A major challenge is that some of the most innovative and entrepreneurial actors in these areas – the early adopters of new and emerging technologies – are in criminal enterprises. How do we unite our global Forces for innovation to achieve a safer tomorrow? Our MIT approach to innovation looks beyond the individual technologies to understand that this is a systemic issue – involving the challenges that large organizations (both public and private) face with innovation, tech adoption, and adaptation to a fast-moving world. It also encourages collaboration among the stakeholders in innovation ecosystem – comprising government agencies and corporate enterprises, but also start-up ventures, university experts and 'risk capital' providers. The mission of public safety is one that can unite us all.

The Rise of Cyber Crime

Despite extensive efforts by companies, governments, and law enforcement agencies around the world, all forms of cyber crime, including data breaches and ransomware attacks, have been increasing every year. According to several reports, there was a 20% increase in data breaches from 2022 to 2023. In the middle east, ransomware gang activity increased by 77% in that same timeframe. Why has this happened? There are many reasons, but we will highlight three that were identified in our research, and what can be done about each: (1) new types of ransomware attacks, (2) cloud misconfiguration, and (3) exploitation of vendor systems.

Innovating in Difficult Times: The Three Revivals of LEGO

No innovation lasts forever – a new product or service may get you a few years of growth, but over time competitors catch up and growth slows down. Companies are challenged to continually come up with new ways to innovate. In this talk, David Robertson will discuss the inspiring case study of LEGO, a company with some almost-deadly innovation failures and some stunning successes. At three different periods in its recent history, growth stopped at the company and it had to find new opportunities for growth. In this speech Robertson will talk about LEGO's history of innovation, and why this new growth period may be the company's greatest. He will draw lessons for any company interested in boosting innovation.

10.35 – 11.15 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre D Recent Developments in Forensic Biogeographic Ancestry Testing

The presentation introduces the field of Biogeographic Ancestry (BGA) testing and its benefits and limitations to forensic practice. In previous years several molecular genetic tools were developed that generally lend themselves for this purpose, however, little research went into interpretation of the results and harmonization of reporting. Currently, the European DNA Profiling (EDNAP) group investigates these limitations by developing collaborative exercises to benchmark the state-of-the-art of BGA interpretation and develop directions for future guidelines.

13.30 – 13.45 Technical Session | Leadership Keynote| Theatre D The Global Impact of DNA Sequencing In Crime Fighting – Forensic Investigative Genetic Genealogy: Today, Tomorrow, and Beyond

Forensic Investigative Genetic Genealogy (FIGG) emerged several years ago on the world stage as a groundbreaking way of solving violent crimes or identifying persons or remains that would otherwise be classified as unidentified. By navigating key considerations, public safety and law enforcement can responsibly apply this tool to resolve investigations whether be it 10 days old or 10 years old.

Attendee Insights:

The presentation will include case studies of criminal cases solved using FIGG from US, Canada, Sweden, Australia, and other interest coming from Denmark, Poland, and Ireland. The presentation will highlight the successful use of genetic genealogy to identify the offender, giving the names back to unidentified persons or remains, as well as case studies showing the journey of successful exonerations of those wrongfully convicted.

DRONES CONFERENCE

WEDNESDAY 6 MARCH 2024

09.00 – 09.05 | Theatre A

Opening Remarks from Dubai Police and Interpol

09.05 – 09.25 Strategic Session | Leadership Keynote | Theatre A How Drones are Enhancing Police Operations

UAS are playing a significant role in enhancing police operations across various domains by providing new capabilities that improve efficiency, situational awareness, and public safety. While drones offer numerous benefits, their deployment should be accompanied by clear policies and guidelines to address privacy concerns, safety regulations, and ethical considerations.

Scott Kleinfeldt
Lieutenant, Maddison Police Department

Attendee Insights:

Gain the insights on regulations and policy framework for PDs and Law Enforcement Agencies to deploy drones for SWAT operations, explosive detection, hostage situations, and other critical operations. What does it take to build a next-gen command center to develop a new operation model? And challenges of integrating UAS technologies into traditional workflows

09.25 – 10.05 Strategic Session | Leadership Discussion | Theatre A Drones as First Responder

Public safety officers have long needed to respond to emergencies with limited details and often with no real-time information about whatever scene they were thrust into. The Chula Vista Police Department (California, United States) pioneered the groundbreaking Drone as First Responder (DFR) concept for drone flights, remotely launched and piloted from a single command center, to proactively respond to calls for service long before ground-based officers.

Anders Martinsen
CEO, UAS Norway

Roxana Kennedy
Chief of Police, Chula
Vista Police Department

Rasha Azaldin Shafii
Head of Drone Unit, Royal
Malaysia Police

Attendee Insights:

Chief Roxana Kennedy will share the Department's strategies and challenges when developing and implementing new technology. She will discuss the importance of community transparency and finding community support, along with practices that have lead to the DFR program flying over 16,000 missions to date (and counting). Lastly, Chief Kennedy will share her visions for the future of DFR programs and how that will continue to revolutionize daily public safety operations around the world.

FUTURE MOBILITY AND ROAD SAFETY CONFERENCE

13.20 – 13.40 Strategic Session | Case Study | Theatre D Challenges Police Facing in Road Crashes

Global police agencies are facing tremendous challenges in the current law enforcement environment. Such challenges include workforce shortages due to low recruitment and retirement of veteran officers, training and development of existing and new staff, financial concerns, and efficiently answering the needs of the citizens the police serve. While some of these concerns have been observed by leaders for many years, the crises encountered by law enforcement leadership are reaching critical levels. However, each challenge cited has one public safety aspect in common – they all directly impact roadway safety.

Adam Hydee
