

Larry Stevenson

Larry Stevenson is a Former Denver Police Department Gang Unit, SWAT/K9 Officer and is a Law Enforcement Officer Survival Skills Trainer. In 1994, he was the first to introduce and train a major metropolitan police department (Denver Police Department) to Ground Fighting Techniques utilizing Gracie Jiu-Jitsu, while combining Robert Koga arrest control techniques both on compliant and resistant individuals.

In the field of Martial Arts Mr. Stevenson is considered amongst his peers as "a teacher's-teacher" or, simply put, SiGung, a Chinese term meaning, "a master's master." He is a multiple-time State, National and International Karate Champion in bare-knuckle full-contact, no pads-no gloves competition. Mr. Stevenson is a full-contact (bare-knuckle) kick-boxing, international kick-boxing, professional boxing and mixed martial arts Champion and Coach.

Mr. Stevenson is the owner and co-founder of 3D Martial Arts & Tactical Defense School, and creator/developer of the "OSS" (Officer Survival Skills) Program. He instructs verbal de-escalation and tactical communications, close quarters combat survival techniques, weapons retention and weapons access, drawing and accessing weapon (handgun) from unorthodox positions, in-flight access, control and retention of weapons, active shooter response, empty hand weapons, and suspect forced malfunction and subduing techniques.

Mr. Stevenson is a National Lead CQC, weapons retention instructor for Battleline Tactical, hand-picked by both Kris "Tanto" Paronto and Dave "Boon" Benton, the heroes of the Benghazi Terrorist Attacks, to teach the combative portions of classes on a national scale.
