

Marc Fioravanti

Biography

Marc Fioravanti is an innovator within the field of Detention Services. Directly overseeing detention officer training, Marc is an advocate for providing development-based training to those who work behind the walls. In his current position, Marc serves as the School Director / In-Service Training Coordinator for the Guilford County Sheriff's Office. His responsibilities include: The Detention Officer Training Academy, Armed Detention Officer Certification Program, Mandated In-Service Training, and the Field Training Program.

Marc's area of expertise lies in his ability to consistently develop and deliver credible, realistic, and essential training programs directly to his students. He is widely known for his selfless commitment for the training and development of others. As an educator, Marc focuses on the individual student, designing curricula based on their specific need.

Prior to his current assignment, Marc served as a shift supervisor and then administrator to a 1,000-bed facility for over five years. Marc is a former Field Training Officer, Tactical Team Operator, and then Tactical Team Leader with years of experience in close-quarters tactics, verbal de-escalation, and use of force investigation, awareness, and prevention.

Marc is a state certified firearms, defensive tactics, and physical fitness instructor. He teaches this material at two local North Carolina police academies. Marc also holds instructor certifications in verbal de-escalation, impact munitions, Axon-Taser, Basic Life Support/CPR, and the S.P.E.A.R. System.

Marc has a true passion for the training and development of all officers, sworn and non-sworn. A proven leader, Marc utilizes his wealth of classroom experience by helping others, serving as a certified trainer and evaluator for the North Carolina General Instructor Training Program. Marc also serves as an adjunct instructor with two local community colleges. He holds a Master of Criminal Justice from Boston University and a Bachelor's in Political Science from Emmanuel College, Boston.

An avid cyclist, Marc enjoys the outdoors and spending time with his family and two dogs.
