

Michael Musengo

A recently retired Police Training Commander and Director of a mid-sized Regional Police Academy in upstate NY, Sergeant Mike Musengo has studied and implemented non-traditional and empirically supported methods of training which optimizes long term learning, retention and skill transfer into the LEO training experience. These methods coupled with his experience as an instructor in human performance factors has helped him develop training curriculum for not only the officer on the street but the trainers who are responsible for them.

Mike's innovative application of scientifically supported methods of training have gained the attention, praise and application from top trainers in the business. His focus is on how we can help each other become more competent instructors, coaches and leaders within our profession. "Our people, our vocation demand nothing short of highly skilled Professional Instructors."

Mike has also successfully completed the Certification in Force Analysis course and is a graduate of the Advanced Force Science Specialist Course. Mike is also known for his work with the Force Science Institute in many capacities including Instructor in these highly esteemed courses across the US.
